Committee Government

THE question of who shall fill the petty offices of the municipality is the least important phase of city government. Policies are important, not the administrative servants chosen to put them into effect but the tendency here as in many other cities is to disregard the policies except during the few short months immediately preceding a general election.

Perhaps the best suggestion made during the recent public debates on methods to be adopted for raising the funds needed to satisfy the growing needs of this growing city, has been that permanent standing committees representing the businessmen be appointed as an advisory board, to see that policies approved by the taxpayers are put into effect. It is not right for the community to expect the supervisors to outline policies. They do not receive enough pay to enable them to devote all their time to the management of municipal affairs, and can not therefore be asked to do more than they are doing.

Private enterprise always moves faster, is more flexible under changing requirements, and keeps in closer touch with conditions as they are from day to day, than the government. To illustrate, the fruit growing and marketing organizations in California, the one State where more has been done in the way of cooperative marketing than any other, have recently fought the enactment of a law providing for the appointment of a State superintendent of cooperative markets. The argument used by the California farmers was just this, that cooperative societies under individual management are far in advance of any government official organizations, where real business is to be done.

The same truth applies everywhere. It applies here. Business is always the leader in originating civic movement. The businessman must keep abreast of the times. He has to meet competition without creating enmities, and unless he is keenly alive he is going to be left behind. There are few businessmen who really want to take public office and that is the reason why reform governments are mostly failures.

Hence government positions must be filled by citizens who are satisfied to revolve within predestined orbits, but they ought to be paid sufficient salaries to enable them to live, and devote all their energies to administration of the laws. If the businessmen can be called on for advice and to outline policies for the officials to put into effect, the result would be a progressive form of municipal government.

Uncle Sam's Law

THE Black Tom Island explosion which cost many lives and destroyed over twenty million dollars in property appears to have been caused by a fire which broke out on one of four barges loaded with trinitrotoluol and shells, moored abreast at the end of a Jersey city pier.

The Interstate Commerce Commission had enacted regulations controlling the transportation of munitions providing that when cars loaded with explosives were left on sidings, or at terminals, they should be separated at wide intervals. The law also provided that when loaded into scows or barges these should be immediately towed to a designated locality in the harbor and anchored at specified distances apart.

The arrest and federal indictment on the charge of murder, of the officials of the storage company owning the pier, and the officials of the railroad company whose cars contained the explosives followed testimony that four loaded barges were left banked against the wharf, and that several full trainloads of explosives were crowded on the wharf the night before the explosion occurred.

The United States government does not condone or palliate offences against the law even when, as in this case, the entire property of one of the parties at fault was practically annihilated. The federal authorities have put the blame on the high officials of the two companies, holding that it was through their negligence that the subordinate officials were permitted to break the law.

Federal Farm Loans

THE new federal farm loan act specifies four purposes for which the money may be obtained—to purchase land for agricultural uses; to provide for the purchase of equipment, fertilizers and livestock, the term equipment to be defined by the federal farm loan board; to provide buildings and permanent improvements; and, "to liquidate indebtedness of the owner of the land mortgaged, existing at the time of the organization of the first national farm loan association established in or for the county in which the land mortgaged is situated, or indebtedness subsequently incurred for one of the purposes mentioned in this section."

Loans may be made only on first mortgages on farm land, and only those who are themselves farmers are entitled to borrow. No farmer can borrow more than $10,000 or less than $100. No loan can be made for more than half the value of the land, nor for over twenty per cent of the value of permanent insured improvements upon it, for less than five or more than forty years. Debt and interest must be repaid in full by the end of the term of the loan, in fixed periodical installments.

The Appearance of Evil

THE senior senator from New Mexico, Mr. Fall, because of his long residence in the southern republic is regarded in Washington as the best informed member in Congress in all that relates to Mexico and her internal affairs. A new authority on matters Mexican is rapidly making a name for himself and trouble for the administration in the person of Representative William A. Rodenberg of Illinois, Republican. Mr. Rodenberg is said to have never crossed the border and to know little of the Spanish language but he never misses an opportunity of attacking the administration's Mexican policies these days and he does this with an array of facts which are convincing to the Republicans and apparently irrefutable to the Democratic side of the House for the few majority members who have undertaken to reply to the Illinois member have been utterly silenced.

In the Congressional Record of August 4 is a speech delivered by the Illinois congressman in which, by implication, he connects the recent importation of ammunition into Mexico to the Carranza forces by authority of the State Department with the fact that the manufacturer of these bullets which may have been used at Carrizal is one Cleveland H. Dodge, a personal friend of President Wilson and the largest individual contributor to the Democratic campaign fund in 1912.

Towards the conclusion of a spirited arraignment of the administration policy, which bristles in every sentence with facts and figures obtained from competent authority, the Illinois congressman said:

"If the recital of Mexican outrages as portrayed in that note of Mr. Lansing to Carranza is based on fact, then that recital constitutes a stronger indictment of Democratic inefficiency and incompetence than any partisan Republican should ever hope to affirm. In that recital Mr. Lansing says the adherents and soldiers of Carranza were alone responsible for the attacks near Brownsville, Grey's Ferry and several other places, all of which occurred last September. Notwithstanding that, the Administration has complacently allowed Carranza to import ammunition into Mexico to be used in attacks on American citizens and property."

"The trouble at Parral, where troops of general Pershing's columns were attacked, occurred as late as April 14 of this year, and now I am about to say something which I think will interest you. Four days after the attack at Parral, which was made by Carranza soldiers on April 14, Secretary Lansing issued an order, which I have seen, authorizing a shipment of one million rounds of small arms ammunition to Mexico to Carranza's agents."

"The day before that order was signed by the Secretary of State, Cleveland H. Dodge, Vice President of the Phelps Dodge Company, was in Washington and called upon Secretary Lansing. The Phelps Dodge Company is engaged in the manufacture and sale of munitions of war, and is the same company that was indicted in the closing days of the Taft Administration for violating the embargo placed upon the shipment of munitions into Mexico but escaped conviction on a technicality that the ammunition had not reached Mexico, but was stopped, I believe, at Bisbee, Arizona."

"Cleveland H. Dodge is a most interesting gentleman. The records show that he was the heaviest individual campaign contributor to the Democratic Party in 1912. He is supposed to have contributed, all told, about ninety thousand dollars, the records showing that his first contribution was thirty thousand dollars. I do not make any charge against the integrity of the Administration. I do not know that the ammunition that was shipped under the last order of Secretary Lansing was shipped by the Phelps Dodge Company, but I cannot help wondering if there is any connection between the visit of Mr. Dodge to Secretary Lansing and the issuance of that particular order."

"That ammunition which crossed the line by that authority was subsequently used at Carrizal, where nineteen of our soldiers, including two officers, lost their lives. If there should be any connection between Mr. Dodge's visit and the shipment of those munitions I only say, 'God have mercy on any political party that will allow a campaign contributor to recoup himself at the expense of the lives of our soldiers.'"

It was alleged editorially in the columns of the Maui News of August 11, that the representative of The Advertiser at the Maui races, July 4, was intoxicated. This was allowed to pass because The Advertiser's reporter, G. J. Boisse, is not a drinking man, as the editor of the Maui News was well aware when he insinuated that this paper was "lying" in the cause of prohibition. Mr. Boisse sat beside the Maui editor in the grandstand during the races and having received many courtesies from his fellow-journalist, did not care to reply to the unkindly insinuation at the time it appeared in black and white. Now, however, that a Hilo paper has seen fit to reprint this discourteous untruth, The Advertiser takes this opportunity of denying the allegation of the Maui News as fabricated out of whole cloth. Our reporter at the Maui races did not have a "skate" on to quote the elegant diction of our Maui critic.

After conducting 660 complete milling and baking tests of different varieties of wheat from 1907 to 1914, E. F. Ladd of the North Dakota experiment station declares there is no marked variation in loaf-volume, or bread making quality in the different commercial grades of wheat from one locality in one season. Climatic and seasonal influences are more important than variety in producing quality in flour, and have more influence than variety in varying the proportion of flour that can be manufactured from a given quantity of wheat.

Our telegraph editor agrees with General Sherman. War is all that, and then some. No sooner does he get acquainted with one set of names of places along the different European "fronts" than the armies move forward, or back, or sideways and uncover a new bunch of consonants which have to be memorized and used in their proper sequence. Sherman said it.

RICHARD H. TRENT'S WALLABIES FLEE FROM THEIR CAGES

Strange Australian Pets of Real Estate Man Escape Into Mountains

Richard H. Trent, Honolulu's animal impresario, issues a call to all citizens of Oahu today to join in a mammoth, personally conducted wallaby hunt, the first of its kind ever held in the Hawaiian archipelago.

Two of the three small kangaroos which he obtained last week from Australia, at great trouble and expense, escaped from the Trent zoological garden on Alewa Heights Saturday night and at latest reports last night were roaming at will in the Oahu forests.

Inhabitants are warned hereby that the animals positively are not dangerous; will not bite anything more than grass, leaves or succulent forest shrubbery. The unfortunate owner offers a reward of twenty-five dollars for their capture and return alive.

Unless the animals are caught they may become permanent denizens of the mountain districts and, like their distant cousins, the Australian rabbits, may propagate and produce eventually a horde of Hawaiian wallabies. But meantime the public would be deprived of gazing upon them at close range and observing the peculiarities of the unusual, antipodean animals.

Mr. Trent's zoo is practically a public institution, maintained at his personal, private expense for the pleasure, and his loss really amounts to a public deprivation. The wallabies are perfectly harmless, it is said, but they may prove exceedingly difficult to capture.

MAJ. JOSEPH FRAZIER ASKS FOR RETIREMENT

Officer Well Known Here Seeks To Leave Army

Maj. Joseph Frazier, Twenty-sixth Infantry, former major in the First Infantry at Schofield Barracks, has been placed on the retired list, at his own request, after a service of thirty years. He was appointed to West Point in July, 1886, and was graduated in 1891 and assigned to the Nineteenth Infantry as a second lieutenant. He was promoted to his first lieutenancy in January, 1898, and sent to the Ninth Infantry, joining his regiment at San Juan Hill on July 7 of that year in time to participate in the siege of San Juan.

Following this service he was appointed to General Ewers taking station at Guantanamo and San Luis, Cuba, and was ordered to join his regiment in the Philippines in June, 1909.

He accompanied the Ninth Infantry to China in the Boxer campaign, commanded Company H of that regiment and participated in all the engagements on the march from Tientsin to Peking, being recommended for a brevet and for the medal of honor for his services.

When Col. Emerson H. Loomis, commanding the Ninth Infantry, was shot down by a Boxer bullet at the engagement at Tien-Tsin on July 13, 1900, Major Frazier and three enlisted men covered the body under heavy fire to a protected portion of the field. On the eleventh of August of that year he was promoted to a captaincy in the Twenty-sixth Infantry, and a week later was transferred to the Fourteenth Infantry one of the regiments in China. He received his majority in the First Infantry in 1912, accompanied that regiment to Hawaii and was transferred to the Twenty-sixth Infantry on the border about a year ago.

Major Frazier is a graduate of the Infantry and Cavalry School of the class of 1897. The reason for his submitting his application for retirement is understood to be Mrs. Frazier's failing health.

MOTORCYCLES CARRY WIRELESS OUTFITS

Army Has Light Apparatus Carrying Message Thirty Miles

The Signal Corps have been experimenting some interesting tests with wireless telegraphy on the border and as a result the army now has a new motorcycle wireless outfit. It consists of a sending and receiving apparatus carried on the side bars of three motorcycles. A motor attachment is provided to be run by the engines of the three machines.

This motor outfit furnishes the power for sending messages and is reported to be far superior to the hand power requiring the physical efforts of at least two men of the detachment, now in use in all field signal companies. Seven men are all that are required for the motorcycle wireless outfit. One of the features of the apparatus is an aerial or tower of hinged steel, capable of being raised to a height of forty feet and of being parked in small compass for transportation on motorcycle.

The equipment is capable of sending messages for thirty miles where static conditions are good. Several motorcycle wireless outfits are to be organized on the border so that wireless communication even to small detachment stations will be possible.

Conscientious Cop Lags Wee Wife Just For Gambling

Policeman Abe of Hilo Department Herds Spouse In With Other Victims

Hilo is boasting possession of the most conscientious known policeman. On last Monday evening Officer Abe, a Japanese member of the municipal department, arrested his own wife, in company with a number of other men and women, for gambling.

He herded her in with the others and took her to headquarters. When she was recognized by the desk sergeant she was released on her personal recognizance, and when the case came to trial Wednesday she was discharged, the court finding that she had not been an active participant in the game.

District Judge Wise, in ordering her release, remarked that it was one of the most unusual cases he had known. "I think Policeman Abe ought to have his salary raised," the court commented. Abe afterwards received the congratulations of his fellow officers and acquaintances. What he received from the wife when he returned home, is not known.

POLICEMEN TOO LATE STOP COCK FIGHTING

Misinterpretation of an excited Japanese woman's telephone call for help, caused the captain of police at Honolulu, Hawaii, to make an exciting ride with two of his officers last week, to the new camp in that district, thinking he was to interfere in a mortal combat between a Filipino and a Japanese. The combat was mortal all right, and the captain arrived too late to save the victim, but the combatants proved to be only game cocks.

One was a bird of Filipino pedigree and the other was Japanese. The less skillful of the two was the property of the Japanese woman who had phoned the authorities. When the captain and his aides arrived he found a crowd of men gathered around the two birds, the winners hilariously collecting bets from the others. The officers arrested as many of the fellows as they could catch, and took them to jail on a charge of encouraging and abetting cock fighting.

Craig Bowdish, the pastor, conducted the service yesterday morning. Rev. R. B. Dodge assisted him and delivered an address. H. A. Baldwin assisted in the actual placement of the cornerstone. Mrs. L. C. Jones and H. Washburn Baldwin sang a duet, and the Molokai choir sang two anthems. The church congregation and hundreds of other citizens of the Valley Island witnessed the ceremony.
